

The pandemic, which made fathers of a newborn stay more at home, highlighted the importance of their implication with their children:

Among the fathers of young children who participated in our study on couples of new parents, during the pandemic:

- 83% felt more invested in their role as a father.
- 81% felt closer to their children.
- 88% spend more quality time with their family.

We wish a happy Father's Day to all dads!

We acknowledge that not all families include a father. However, the way men are socialized may encourage them less to be involved as fathers in their children's upbringing, while it is linked to benefits for the children and the family.*
